A NEWSPAPER SAVEST SAVE that there ar two kinds of house files—those that bite and those that do not; and he has discovered a way to tell them apart. There is an easier and more certain method of distinguishing them namely: by the bites.

could read with so much advantage to yourselves as a newspaper. Every family should take one and pay for it. The long winter evenings are coming on, and, as you sit by your firesides, you will need something to keep thinking about If you can't read yourselves, get the children to read for you, or a neighbor will come in and read, and the discussions over what you hear will pass the dreary nights pleasantly away. What is a newspaper? It is a book, containing every sort of information—a hive, with every kind of honey in it. Every paper is worth ten times what it costs to buy it, and I doubt if any money which a father spends is so well invested as that which he puts into a good family newspaper. I have in my pocket a paper for which I paid to-day only five cents—one-third the price of a glass of bad rum you black men buy too often. Let us see what this paper contains. First, we have the news from Washington; then telegrams from all parts of Ohio, where they are discussing the suffrage question, and where an eloquent man of your own color, from this city, is now on the stump. Next we have news from every State in the Union, and all about what went on yesterday in Europe. Here is a lot of conumdrums, jokes, anecdotes, and a letter from the funny man, Nasby. Now we have a pretty story about a king, a tale of a miser who lived in rags and hoarded his gold: and then we read an account of one of the great battless of the war.

"Here is a speech unde by a colored man in Tennessee, letters from General Butler, Charles Sumner, the President's proclamation, a speech by Senator Wade, how to raise chickens, potatoes, corn, and all kinds of vegetables; the price of everything we eat, drink, and wear in Cinninati; all about the murder over at Danville and the horse-races last week here, which it would have cost you five dollars to have gone to see. Then we read a story of a good boy, a fairy tale for children, something about the indians, a battle in South America, a history of Mexico, and there are eight in it; all this and f "Those who are offended at humor in Heary Ward Beecher, should listen to Spurgeon, both in and out of the pulpit. We shall never forget the evening when we stood in a dense crowd in the Free Church Assembly Hall in Edinburgh, and heard him address the Scotch ministers and olders on an effective way of preaching the gospel, for more than an hour. He insisted on brief and varied exercises in meeting for prayer and conference, adding: "I never like to have one of my deasons pray for half an hour, and conclude with asking the Lord to forgive our shortchmisgs!" That pun doubtless cured many of his hearers of the habit in question, although as we looked into the faces of the audience, we saw not a few of the grave Scotch elders twisting their festures in their efforts to avoid so sinful a thing as a smile in a religious meeting. We may as well learn to be natural in religion, and to laugh at laughable things as well as to weep over those which are mournful. The sie man and, 'There is a time to weep and a time to laugh,' and who shall not say that both do not find their time occasionally during a sermon? Isaiah once preached on the folly of idolatry, and drew a picture of the ridiculous conduct of the man who selected a log of wood, and made a god out of one part and cooked his dinner with the remainder! We suspect it was one of the most effective of his discourses, even if it excited a smile when delivered. The question of right is not to be decided by the most effective of an enscorress, even if it excited a smile when delivered. The question of right is not to be decided by the gravity or humor of what is said, but by the motive of the speaker and the adaptation to a good end of what he says."

Dears. Dear. No Inventions.—A Paris letter, in the Messager de Toulon, says: "The experiments with small cannon are still going on. The other day one was tried at a distance of 1,500 yards on a cluster of trees, which were all out down in a few minutes, just as a field of corn falls before a steam mowing machine. The effect was terrible. Five or six men armed with such an engine might destroy a whole fect was terrible. Five or six men armed with such an engine might destroy a whole regiment in a very little time. To attenuate the terrible ravages of firearms, and to restore to the bayonet the importance that seems to be escaping it, competent military men are occupying themselves with the organization of night attacks. The tactics of such noctural computations studied with great care at the bats are studied with great care, at the schools of St. Cyr, the Polytechnic, and of the staff. Lastly, much is being done in the way of constructing gunboats which can be taken to pieces and carried from place to place." The Portrait of the Queen has been deposited in the Peabody Institute, at South Danvers, together with the address on velum, illuminated in gold and colors, presented Mr. Peabody by the London Workingmen's Association; the gold box in which the freedom of the city of London don had been conveyed to him, and the gold medal, being prepared in accordance with the will of the Congress of the United States.

THE OVETER TRADE.—The packers are The Overer Thade.—The packers are making every preparation to go into active operations as soon as the weather will permit. Mr. Frank Pfeiffer, one of the largest dealers, has already made two shipments, one by each of the Boaton and New York lines of steamers. Some idea of the extent to which this business is carried on at this city may be arrived at when we state that his shipments last year by the Northern routes amounted weekly to 14, 100 bushels in bags, and from 300 to 500 barrels of selected cysters to fill orders.—Norfolk Virginian. long with your hands."

Mency to Animala.—Some interesting experiments have been made lately at the slaughter-houses of Vincennes as to the most merciful manner of killing animals with the least possible suffering. At present oxen are slaughtered by blows from heavy hanmers on the head, which necessarily inflict the racest frightful terture on the unfortunate victims of our carnivorous propensities. The idea occurred to an eminent physiologist that the section of the spine would produce more instant death. This, however, has not been demonstrated. An ox thus killed lived for twelve minutes, and endured during that time the most horrible sufferings. Decapitation was then tried, with the following curious results: "A calf was hung up and decapitated in the space of a quarter of a minute. Its head was then placed on a table. In six minutes two ounces and a half of blood was lost. During the first minute the face was fright-$700.

ounces and a hall of blood was lost. During the first minute the face was frightfully convulsed, the mouth opened and shut as though the animal were eating; and, strange to say, on putting the hand against the mouth and nostril, it was easy to feel the respiration continuing. Thirty animals were thus killed, and the result of the observations taken was that the com-mittee decided that the old practice of killing by means of blows from a hammer should be continued.
